Collection Summary

Collection number: MIS.2.002
Repository Code: MoSJJA
Repository: Jesuit Archives: Central United States
Title: The Queen’s Work collection
Date [bulk]: circa 1913-1988
Date [inclusive]: circa 1868-1988
Extent: 38 linear feet (38 boxes)
Creator: Jesuits. Missouri Province.
Creator: Lord, Daniel A. (Daniel Aloysius), 1888-1955
Language of material: English and Latin

Abstract: The Queen’s Work was founded by Jesuits of the Missouri Province, specifically at the bequest of Jesuit General Father, Francis Xavier Wernz, and the Missouri Province leadership in the persons of Alexander J. Burrowes and Edward Garesché, to provide “a journal of national character” which would “[publish] articles of interest to all Catholics.” The Queen’s Work collection contains an impressive amount of data concerning the lives of ordinary Catholics from the turn of the nineteenth century to the years of the Second Vatican Council. Far from being non-existent in the life of the Church, the laity driven Sodalities, which the magazine sought to showcase, depicted a vibrant and Catholic American landscape.

Processing history: Processed by Jesuit Archives Staff and interns. Additional description by Alexandra M. Bisio in 2016.

Conditions governing access: This collection is open for research.

Conditions governing reproduction and use: The archival records in the Jesuit Archives: Central United States are the property of the Northeastern, Central and Southern, Chicago-Detroit, and Wisconsin Provinces of the Society of Jesus. Historical note

The history of The Queen’s Work is almost synonymous with the expansion of American prosperity following World War I. With a powerful and vibrant economy, the United States of America dominated in its spheres of influence, which gave ordinary American citizens a peaceful state of mind to raise families, practice their religion, and contribute to society. In this space of time, The Queen's Work was founded by Jesuits of the Missouri Province, specifically at the bequest of Jesuit General Father, Francis Xavier Wernz, and the Missouri Province leadership in the persons of Alexander J. Burrowes and Edward Garesché, to provide “a journal of national character” which would “[publish] articles of interest to all Catholics.” The magazine often highlighted the particular activities of Sodalities throughout the country run by Jesuits, such as The Knights and Handmaidens of the Blessed Sacrament, the Sodality of Our Lady, the Summer School of Catholic Action, and the Shut-In-Sodality.

In later years, The Queen's Work was given a new direction under Jesuit Father Daniel Aloysius Lord, a prolific composer and writer of many articles, books, musical scores, plays, and pamphlets, to “publish the magazine strictly as a tool of Sodality promotion and instruction,” in order to better serve Sodalists who “were leading lives of fine virtue and [who work] energetically in parishes, schools, and hospitals” in their mission of “awakening the militant Catholicity” in the many places they were active. The Queen’s Work continued production of books for children, teens, and adults, pamphlets, and periodicals for an ever-growing Catholic population. Lord also believed that “the Sodalists need a medium through which they can become better acquainted…They need help, practical help, in solving sodality problems. They need inspiration from a knowledge of the larger Catholic activity going on throughout the World.” Many Jesuits such as Aloysius Heeg, Gerald Kelly, and William B. Faherty and laywoman Dorothy Willmann would share in Lord’s mission and continue publication until 1969.

Following the Second Vatican Council, many of the Sodalities featured in The Queen’s Work publications were absorbed from the umbrella group known as the National Federation of Sodalities into a re-focused group named Christian Life Communities, which the Most Reverend Leo C. Byrne, Coadjutor Archbishop of Saint Paul and Minneapolis confided to his Archdiocese on May 15, 1968, “The ideals and the motivation are the same, but focus is directed more particularly to the needs of our present-day world…I believe it can be one of the best answers to Vatican II’s invitation to holiness. Its updated principles are truly attractive and it will give a new look toward spirituality for the laity.”

The Queen’s Work collection contains an impressive amount of data concerning the lives of ordinary Catholics from the turn of the nineteenth century to the years of the Second Vatican Council. Far from being non-existent in the life of the Church, the laity driven Sodalities, which the magazine sought to showcase, depicted a vibrant and Catholic American landscape. Thus, it appears that with the new emphasis on Christian Life Communities, the laity driven mission to promote Catholicism continued previous endeavors of the earlier Sodalities, which had garnered the praise and admiration of the Jesuits of the Missouri Province.
